Are your managers ready for the next Middle Management Academy? Get them up to speed and ready to shine at the next MMA!

"The MMA... It has changed both my work and my personal life in such a positive way. I have been able to employ the skills and tips I learnt, with great results almost immediately. What I liked most about the MMA was the variety of items presented as well as system change, elements of great meetings, financial concepts, data management, etc."

MMA gives managers the skills they need to manage work and people, but it also connects them to the bigger vision of their organizations. Organizations that have sent their managers to the Middle Management Academy have realized the return in results-driven management, reflected in improved workforce competency and productivity, effective decision-making, and focus on the bottom line.

NABHO is partnering with National Council to bring you Middle Management Academy. An in-person, 3.5-day group training program that offers management training customized for health care safety-net staff.

"I attended the Middle Management Academy in 2014. The training has helped me be a better communicator, and leader among my team. I learned a more effective approach to conflict resolution and problem solving that has helped me in my roles as a leader and while working with clients."

The Middle Management Academy is the only program of its kind for future health care leaders. Steeped in proven business strategy, MMA is an intensive, practical, and highly interactive training that helps participants understand what great managers do differently. Participants address real-world questions relevant to behavioral health.

Full cost for the 3.5-day training is $935.
Costs cover training materials, continental breakfast, and breaks.
A block of rooms is available for $110/night.

"The Middle Management Academy was a transformative experience for me and has continued to benefit me in the years since. I learned so much about my own leadership style, how to effectively lead a team, and so much more that I was more excited about returning to work than I have ever been. I've continued to use all the incredible things I learned from my experience with the MMA, and I can't recommend it highly enough for anyone in management who is looking to continue developing their skills as a leader."

"I completed the Middle Management Academy through NCCBH in March 2002. I still use the skills I learned, from the training, in my role as a leader at my agency. The academy helped me understand how to work in groups, allow for difference in styles of communication, and bring people together for a common goal. It helped move me forward in my professional career as a Behavioral Health Provider."
